FEDERAL INCOME TAX

Federal Tax Resources

Tax research focuses primarily on the Internal Revenue Code and the various primary and secondary materials that interpret that code. A tax problem often involves legislative, judicial, and administrative interpretations. Administrative sources play an especially important role in tax research, and understanding the numerous administrative proclamations and whether they are binding or persuasive authority is essential.

iv. Administrative (IRS) Rulings

Internal Revenue Cumulative Bulletin

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is cumulated twice a year and published as the Cumulative Bulletin. The IRB publishes revenue rulings, treasury decisions, notices, revenue procedures, and miscellaneous items, as well as Supreme Court decisions, treaties, tax statutes, and proposed regulations. Other documents, including private letter rulings, are not officially published but are often available in other sources. Ask the reference librarian for assistance in accessing these sources. IRS pronouncements published in the IRB are binding authority and must be followed by the IRS.

Electronic Access Only: From any computer (Law Library or home) at the IRS website www.irs.gov/app/picklist/list/internalRevenueBulletins.html

B. Case Law

Federal income tax cases originate in the U.S. Tax Court, the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, or one of the U.S. District Courts. Federal tax cases originating in the U.S. Court of Federal Claims are reported in the Federal Claims Reporter, available on the Law Library's computers using WestlawNext. Federal tax cases originating in the U.S. District Courts are reported in the Federal Supplement, Federal Reporter, or Supreme Court Reporter, all in Compact Shelving.

The U.S. Tax Court issues two types of decisions: regular decisions and memorandum decisions. A regular decision involves a new or unusual point of law. A memorandum decision generally involves the application of existing law or an interpretation of fact. Memorandum decisions are not officially published.
